

What is a resident physician?

A resident physician is a licensed medical doctor who has earned a medical degree (MD or DO) and is completing three years of advanced training in Family Medicine. During residency, these physicians care for patients in both the hospital and clinic settings. They provide comprehensive health care while working in close collaboration with our experienced faculty physicians, who supervise every patient encounter. This team-based approach gives you direct access to dedicated doctors while providing high-quality, personalized care.
